

About Our Contributors

Samuel W. Calhoun is Professor of Law at Washington and Lee University School of Law, where he teaches contracts, legal writing, commercial law, and a seminar entitled “The Abortion Controversy.” His principal areas of scholarly interest are the abortion debate and the interrelationship of law and religion. He received his B.A. from Harvard College and his J.D. from the University of Georgia School of Law.

Robert C. Cetrulo, J.D., is a practicing attorney in Covington, Kentucky and president of the Northern Kentucky Right to Life Committee. He received his legal education at the University of Kentucky College of Law and served as U.S. Magistrate-Judge for the Eastern Judicial District of Kentucky from 1960 to 1975. He has taught political science and constitutional law at the University of Kentucky Northern Community College and lectured at the Salmon P. Chase College of Law. He is the author of various articles, including articles in the Kentucky Law Journal and the Kentucky Bench & Bar Quarterly.

John J. Conley, S.J. holds the Francis X. Knott Chair of Philosophy and Theology at Loyola College in Maryland. Recent books include The Suspicion of Virtue: Women Philosophers in Neoclassical France (Cornell University Press, 2002), Jacqueline Pascal: A Rule for Children and Other Writings (University of Chicago Press, 2003), Madame de Maintenon (University of Chicago Press, 2004), and Adoration and Annihilation: The Convent Philosophy of Port Royal (University of Notre Dame Press, 2009).

Anne Barbeau Gardiner is Professor Emerita in the Department of English at John Jay College, City University of New York. She has published two books on Dryden, including Ancient Faith and Modern Freedom in John Dryden's The Hind and the Panther (Catholic University of America Press, 1998). She has also published numerous essays on Milton, Dryden, and Swift, including “Jonathan Swift and the Idea of the Fundamental Church” in Fundamentalism and Literature, ed. Catherine Pessoa-Miquel and Klaus Stierstorfer (New York NY: Palgrave MacMillan, 2007), pp. 21-43.

Robert Gotcher received his doctorate in theology from Marquette University and has taught theology at Sacred Heart School of Theology in Hales Corners, Wisconsin.

James G. Hanink, Professor of Philosophy at Loyola Marymount University, has been active in pro-life work since 1972. His special interests include Thomism, personalism, and political philosophy. He has contributed essays, editorials and reviews to several publications, both academic and general.

Jeff Koloze received his doctorate in English at Kent State University in 2001 and is Campus College Chair for the College of Arts and Sciences at the Columbus, Ohio Campus of the University of Phoenix. He has taught communications, undergraduate and graduate English, and humanities courses since 1989 at several colleges and universities in the Cleveland, Columbus, and Springfield, Ohio metropolitan areas. His primary research interest is the presentation of the right-to-life issues of abortion, infanticide, and euthanasia in American fiction; most of his publications on these matters are available in conference proceedings and on the web. His most recent book is An Ethical Analysis of the Portrayal of Abortion in American Fiction: Dreiser, Hemingway, Faulkner, Dos Passos, Brautigan, and Irving. He can be reached at JeffKolozePhD@sbcglobal.net.

Joseph W. Koterski, S.J. is a member of the Philosophy Department at Fordham University, where he has taught since his priestly ordination in 1992. He also serves as the Editor-in-Chief of International Philosophical Quarterly and as Master of Queen's Court Residential College for Freshmen. He regularly teaches courses on natural law ethics and on medieval philosophy. He has produced videotaped lecture-courses on "Aristotle's Ethics," on "Natural Law and Human Nature," and most recently on "Biblical Wisdom Literature" for The Teaching Company. Among his recent publications: An Introduction to Medieval Philosophy: Basic Concepts (Wiley-Blackwell, 2009).

Richard S. Myers is Professor of Law at Ave Maria School of Law. He is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Kenyon College. He earned his law degree at Notre Dame, where he won the law school's highest academic prize. He began his legal career by clerking for Judge John F. Kilkenny of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Professor Myers taught at Case Western Reserve University School of Law and the University of Detroit Mercy School of Law before joining the Ave Maria faculty. He has also taught as a visitor at Notre Dame Law School. He has published extensively on constitutional law. Professor Myers has co-edited two books: St. Thomas Aquinas and the Natural Law Tradition: Contemporary Perspectives (The Catholic University of America Press, 2004) and Encyclopedia of Catholic Social Thought, Social Science, and Social Policy (Scarecrow Press, 2007). He is the president of University Faculty for life and the executive secretary of the Society of Catholic Social Scientists. Professor Myers is married to Mollie Murphy, who is a Professor of Law at Ave Maria School of Law. They are the proud parents of six children.

Craig Payne has taught at the college level since 1990, at Indian Hills College in Iowa and Truman State University in Missouri, primarily in the areas of philosophy, religion, and literature. He has had three books published, the most recent being What Believers Don't Have to Believe: The Non-Essentials of the Christian Faith. He holds a doctorate in theology and religious studies from the University of Wales, St. David's University College. Craig is married to a professional clown and has two children. All of them live in southeastern Iowa.

Edmund Pellegrino, M.D., is the John Carroll Professor Emeritus of Medicine at Georgetown University Medical Center. He served as Director of the Institute (1983-1989), and the Center for Clinical Bioethics at the Medical Center (1991-1996). Dr. Pellegrino is the recipient of 42 honorary doctoral awards. Author of more than 500 publications, he is best known for his discussions of Christian virtue and medical ethics in the treatment of patients, humanism and the physician, and the philosophical basis of medical treatment. He is the founding editor of Journal of Medicine and Philosophy.

Janet E. Smith holds the Michael J. McGivney Chair of Life Ethics at Sacred Heart Major Seminary. She is the author of Humanae Vitae: A Generation Later and a Right to Privacy; co-author with Christopher Kaczor of Life Issues, Medical Choices, and editor of Why Humanae Vitae Was Right: A Reader.

She is best known for her talk “Contraception: Why Not.” She has published widely on sexual ethics, bioethics, and the principles of moral theology.

Matthew Lewis Sutton, Ph.D. has taught at the College of St. Benedict and St. John’s University in Minnesota and now teaches Christian Spirituality and Mysticism at St. John’s University in Queens, New York. He has a B.A. in Catholic Studies from the University of St. Thomas in Minnesota, having also studied abroad at the Pontifical Institute of St. Thomas Aquinas, the Angelicum, in Rome, Italy. He earned his M.A. and Ph.D. at Marquette University in Systematic Theology with his dissertation on the Trinitarian Mysticism of Adrienne von Speyr. He is married to Elizabeth and is graced with three daughters, Felicity, Anastasia, and Edith.

Lynn D. Wardle is the Bruce C. Hafen Professor of Law at the J. Reuben Clark Law School, Brigham Young University, where he has taught Family Law, Biomedical Ethics and Law, and other courses since 1978. He is past President (2000-02), Secretary-General (1994-2000) and current Executive Council member (1991-94, 2002-present) of the International Society of Family Law; has been a visiting professor or lecturer at other law schools in Scotland, Japan, Australia, China, and the U.S. He has made academic presentations in more than 25 nations, most dealing with Family Law. He is author or co-author 6 books, editor or co-editor of eight other books (most recently The Jurisprudence of Marriage and Other Intimate Relationships, with Professor Scott FitzGibbon of Boston College Law School (Wm. S. Hein & Co. 2010)), and of over 100 articles and chapters, most dealing with family law or biomedical law issues. He is a member of the American Law Institute; and serves on the Boards of Directors or Advisory Boards of national and international legal publications, and other professional and scholarly associations, including University Faculty for Life, and previously of Americans United for Life, and of the National Right to Life Committee.

Christopher Wolfe is Emeritus Professor of Political Science at Marquette University. He currently is Vice-President of the Thomas International Project and Co-Director of the Ralph McInerney Center for Thomistic Studies. He graduated summa cum laude from Notre Dame in 1971 with a major in government and went on to study political philosophy at Boston College, receiving his Ph.D. in 1978. During his graduate studies he “migrated” from political philosophy to American Political Thought and Constitutional Law. He taught at Assumption College from 1975 to 1978 and came to Marquette in 1978. Dr. Wolfe's main area of research and teaching for two decades was Constitutional Law, and his books include The Rise of Modern Judicial Review: From Constitutional Interpretation to Judge-Made Law (Basic Books, 1986), Judicial Activism: Bulwark of Freedom or Precarious Security? (Brooks/Cole, 1991), and How to Read the Constitution: Originalism, Constitutional Interpretation, and Judicial Power (Rowman and Littlefield, 1996). He also edited That Eminent Tribunal: Judicial Supremacy and the Constitution (Princeton University Press, 2004). In his more recent research, Dr. Wolfe has shifted back to political theory, with studies of natural law and liberalism.