

About Our Contributors

Charles Bellinger is an Associate Professor of Theology and Ethics at Brite Divinity School of Texas Christian University. He is the author of The Genealogy of Violence (Oxford, 2001), The Trinitarian Self (Pickwick, 2008), The Joker Is Satan, and So Are We (Churchyard Books, 2010), and Jesus v. Abortion (Cascade, 2016).

Karen C. Chan currently serves as Academic Dean and Associate Professor of Philosophy at St. Patrick's Seminary & University of the Archdiocese of San Francisco. She received her undergraduate degrees from the University of San Francisco and her doctorate in Philosophy from the University of Notre Dame. Her research interests center on Aristotelian-Thomistic moral philosophy and its application to contemporary issues such as medical ethics and motherhood.

John J. Conley, S.J. holds the Henry J. Knott Chair in Philosophy and Theology at Loyola University Maryland. He holds a B.A. from the University of Pennsylvania and his doctorate in philosophy from Louvain. His areas of specialized research include ethics, aesthetics, and modern French philosophy. Major publications include The Suspicion of Virtue: Women Philosophers in Neoclassical France (Cornell University Press, 2002) and Adoration and Annihilation: The Convent Philosophy of Port-Royal (University of Notre Dame Press, 2009). A playwright, his play The Bibliophile was presented at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts (Washington, DC) in 2012.

Jason T. Eberl is the Semler Endowed Chair for Medical Ethics in the College of Osteopathic Medicine at Marian University (Indianapolis IN). He earned his Ph.D. in Philosophy at Saint Louis University. From 2003 to 2013 he held a tenure-line appointment in the Department of Philosophy in the Indiana University School of Liberal Arts. In addition to authoring many articles, he has published a monograph entitled Thomistic Principles and Bioethics. Dr. Eberl's research interests focus on medical ethics, metaphysics, and medieval philosophy. He is particularly interested in the thought of Thomas Aquinas and how his theories of human nature and morality may inform the ethical evaluation of various issues in medical ethics, including those at the margins of human life – such as abortion, human embryonic stem cell research, the definition of death, euthanasia, and organ donation – as well as emerging issues in genetics – such as reproductive cloning, genetic enhancement, and the creation of human/non-human chimeras – and justice in the allocation of health care resources.

Andrew M. Essig is a Professor of Political Science at DeSales University, Center Valley PA. He received his Ph.D. in Political Science from Penn State University, University Park, PA. He studied 1994-1996 at the Christian-Albrechts-Universität in Kiel, Germany through the DAAD. He has several published various articles, including “John Paul II and the New International Order” Catholic Social Science Review, “Catholic International Relations Theory” Fellowship of Catholic Scholars Quarterly, and “The World Bank,” C-FAM, among others. His current areas of interest include: U.S.-Holy See diplomatic relations and Catholic International Relations Theory. He teaches numerous courses in international relations, along with introductory courses in American Government and Political Philosophy.

Vicki Evans is Respect Life Director for the San Francisco Archdiocesan Office of Public Policy and Social Concerns. Her responsibilities include directing community activities, educational programs and legislative advocacy in diverse pro-life areas including abortion, stem cell research, euthanasia and bioethics. The Benemerenti Papal Honor was conferred on her in 2011 for her volunteer work in pro-life ministry. Evans is a practicing CPA and holds a Bachelors degree in Accounting and a Masters degree in Taxation. She earned her Licentiate degree in Bioethics from Pontifical Athenaeum Regina Apostolorum in Rome in 2010, graduating summa cum laude. In her dissertation on Commercial Markets Created by Abortion: Profiting from the Fetal Distribution Chain, she draws on her financial background to expose the abortion industry’s clandestine profits.

Richard J. Fehring, PhD, RN, FAAN, is a Professor Emeritus and Director of the Marquette University College of Nursing Institute for Natural Family Planning. He received his master’s degree and doctorate in nursing from Catholic University of America and baccalaureate degrees in biology and nursing from Marquette University. He has published over 145 articles and book chapters, co-edited three books and has generated over 2.5 million in research and foundation grants. His research interests include effectiveness of fertility awareness methods of family planning, marital responses to family planning, and religious influences on human sexuality.

J. L. A. Garcia is Professor in Boston College's Philosophy Department, and earlier taught in those of Notre Dame, Georgetown, and Rutgers, as well as a term as Visiting Professor in MIT's Department of Linguistics and Philosophy. First as Visiting Fellow, then Research Fellow, and, eventually, Senior Research Scholar, he served under and with Dr. Pellegrino in Washington's Kennedy Institute of Ethics. A specialist in moral theory, social philosophy, and topics in practical ethics, in 2014-2015 Prof. Garcia served as President of the American Catholic Philosophical Association.

Mr. E. Tyler Graham graduated in 1995 from Stanford University, where he first encountered the life and work of René Girard. He went on to further study of the mimetic theory with James G. Williams at Syracuse University where he received an M.A. in religious studies in 1998. In 2010, he also received a Master's Degree in pastoral theology from Ave Maria University. He has published essays on Girard's work related to following areas: St. Augustine, Durkheim, St. John Paul II, Catholic classical education, and mimetic pedagogy. He has been a high school teacher since 1999, and he currently lives with his wife and six children in Ave Maria, Florida, where he teaches at the Rhodora J. Donahue Academy.

James G. Hanink, is Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at Loyola Marymount University, Los Angeles. His interests include Thomism, personalism, and political philosophy. He has contributed essays, editorials and reviews to both academic and general publications. With his wife Elizabeth, he has been active in pro-life work since 1972.

Gary Hardaway holds a Ph.D. in history and philosophy of education from the University of Kansas. He has pastored churches in California, Kansas, and Washington. In the 1970s, he and his wife Lynn served as missionaries in Bolivia. Upon their return, Gary entered public service as a juvenile probation officer in San Jose, California. After four years, Gary was appointed director of Chaplaincy of the Santa Clara County Juvenile Probation Department. He has published articles in such venues as Christianity Today, Moody Monthly, Power, Teen Power, Freeway, Christian Leader, Mennonite Brethren Herald, Christian Life, Christian Reader, Fresno Bee, and Bellingham Herald.

Jeff Koloze has taught academic skills courses for undergraduate and graduate students, Communications, undergraduate and graduate English, and Humanities courses since 1989 at various colleges and universities, including the University of Phoenix, South University, Catholic Distance University, Lakeland Community College, Lorain County Community College, and Walsh University. Dr. Koloze's primary research interest is the presentation of the right-to-life issues of abortion, infanticide, and euthanasia in literature; most of his publications are available in conference proceedings and on the web. He has presented over fifty papers before academic and professional organizations on these topics. He is the author of An Ethical Analysis of the Portrayal of Abortion in American Fiction: Dreiser, Hemingway, Faulkner, Dos Passos, Brautigan, and Irving (2005) and Testament to a Niagara Obsession (2014). Dr. Koloze is president and founder of Koloze Consultants, whose objective is to assist faculty and students "to conduct research on the life issues for presentation and publication."

Joseph W. Koterski, S.J., is a Jesuit priest and member of the Philosophy Department at Fordham University. He is the Editor-in-Chief of International Philosophical Quarterly and served two terms as the President of the Fellowship of Catholic Scholars. He regularly teaches courses on natural law ethics and on medieval philosophy. He has produced videotaped lecture-courses on "Aristotle's Ethics," "Natural Law and Human Nature," and "Biblical Wisdom Literature" for The Teaching Company, and one on "John Paul II's Veritatis Splendor" for the International Catholic University. He has published numerous articles as well as the book An Introduction to Medieval Philosophy: Basic Concepts (2009).

Richard S. Myers is Professor of Law at Ave Maria School of Law. He is a graduate of Kenyon College and Notre Dame Law School. He taught at Case Western Reserve University School of Law and the University of Detroit Mercy School of Law before moving to Ann Arbor, Michigan to help start Ave Maria School of Law. He has also taught as a visitor at Notre Dame Law School. His courses have included Constitutional Law and First Amendment, in addition to Civil Procedure and Conflict of Laws. He has published extensively on constitutional law in the law reviews of Catholic University, Case

Western Reserve University, Notre Dame University, and Washington and Lee University. Professor Myers is the co-editor of St. Thomas Aquinas and the Natural Law Tradition: Contemporary Perspectives (2004). He is also the co-editor of the Encyclopedia of Catholic Social Thought, Social Science, and Social Policy (original two volumes, 2007; 3rd volume 2012). He was the President of University Faculty for Life (2004-2011) and is now its Vice-President. He is the Executive Secretary of the Society of Catholic Social Scientists. Professor Myers is married to Mollie Murphy, who is also on the Ave Maria faculty. They are the proud parents of six children: Michael, Patrick, Clare, Kathleen, Matthew, and Andrew.

William L. Saunders, Jr. writes and speaks on a wide-range of life-related and human rights topics. In addition to long years of service at Americans United for Life, he was Senior Fellow in Bioethics and Human Rights Counsel at the Family Research Council. A member of the Supreme Court bar, he has authored numerous legal briefs in state, federal, foreign, and international courts. His articles have been published by the university presses of Harvard, Villanova, Brigham Young, Fordham, Georgetown, Houston, Scranton, and the Catholic University of America, as well as by the Intercollegiate Studies Institute, Freedom House, Greenhaven Press, Rowan & Littlefield, Praeger, St. Augustine's Press, and Intervarsity Press.

Dane Waterman is a pianist, with something of a specialty in playing Bach. He has taught piano and coached chamber music privately and at various colleges, most recently at the University of Dallas. An adult convert to Christianity, whose catechism was Bach's B Minor Mass, he also has an M.C.S. from Regent College and continues to pursue an amateur and eclectic interest in philosophical theology. He has climbed several hundred mountains, many of them alone. Most of his publications are in the American and Canadian Alpine Journal.

Bernadette Waterman Ward received her A.B. from Harvard and her Ph.D. from Stanford. The author of World as Word: Philosophical Theology in Gerard Manley Hopkins, she is an associate professor of English at the University of Dallas. Most of her academic articles are on Hopkins, John Henry Newman and George Eliot. She is on the governing board of the Newman Association of America. She serves on the board of scholars for the Hopkins Quarterly and the Newman Studies Journal. Her work at University Faculty for Life conferences has mainly involved drama, and she is a playwright.

Carolyn J. Watson is Professor of Art History at Furman University in Greenville, South Carolina. She has published on French Romanesque and Gothic Sculpture and on Early Christian sculpture and currently researches on Flemish fourteen-century manuscript illumination.

Richard Weikart is Professor of Modern European History at California State University, Stanislaus. He has published six books, including The Death of Humanity and the Case for Life (2016), which explains how secular ideologies since the Enlightenment have eroded the Judeo-Christian sanctity-of-life ethic, leading to a “culture of death,” with growing acceptance of abortion, infanticide, assisted suicide, and euthanasia. He has published scholarly and popular articles about the history of eugenics and assisted suicide. His most recent book is Hitler’s Religion: The Twisted Beliefs That Drove the Third Reich (2016).